Agenda: Ground Water Systems make up about 85% of the water systems in the United States. Ground Water comes in the forms of wells and springs. This course teaches the students about the source protection of your groundwater system, the water quality and water treatment that may be required such as iron and manganese removal, ion exchange and disinfection. Pumps, water storage tanks, water sources and valves are few components that require preventative maintenance. We will discuss preventative maintenance that keeps your water system running strong. Sanitary surveys are water system inspections by New Hampshire's Drinking Water and Groundwater Protection Division. As we discuss the O&M of your water system we will look at what the state requires so you will be better prepared for your next sanitary survey.
